Guide To The Fog

Rule #1

“Don’t go into the forest at night,” It’s something my mother used to warn. At night is when the fog is at its thickest and most dangerous. Whatever material you may need just ain’t worth it... Probably the most sensible thing mother ever taught me; well, that and how to wipe my own ass. You’d be surprised by what can be used to get you clean, and what can leave you scratchin’ for days after.

Rule #2

So you're ignoring rule number one and goin’ into the fog anyway, aye? Well, I guess we all do at some point or another. You should at least know this then; Be suspicious! Everyone you meet out there is a potential threat, even those traveling with you.

Rule #3

Always keep a weapon with you. Even something as small as a needle could mean the difference between life, death, and anything in between.

Rule #4

If anyone starts talking about the tower, get away from them as soon as possible. They’ll eventually get someone killed. They always do.

Rule #5

Rule number five is perhaps the most important rule of all. NEVER reveal your name! If the fog gets a hold of it, it’s no longer yours.

Rule #6

Always respect the elk.

The Violet Fog is dangerous, deadly. Do not underestimate it. Do not take it lightly. Avoiding it altogether is the only way to truly ensure survival. With so much more yet to be discovered, these rules are bound to need updating eventually. Until then, keep your eyes peeled, and your footsteps quiet.
